the Magadoux Gallery in Limoges, followed by exhibitions in Royan and numerous other galleries. Starting in 1958, he painted views of Paris, particularly of Montmartre, which brought him success. He gained admission to the highly prestigious Cercle Volney and to Parisian galleries such as the Galerie Roussard. His paintings were exhibited alongside those of Degas, Derain, Domergue, Buffet, Braque, Picasso, Foujita, Utrillo, Laurencin, and others.... until 1969, when he stopped painting due to complications resulting from a traffic accident he had suffered a few years earlier (1963). His success allowed him to live comfortably until his death on March 13, 1999, in Martoulet, Saint-Germain-Les-Belles (87).
