Description

Curved Louis XV Transition console table, early 19th century. An openwork, undulating band in the shape of a crossbow, decorated with shells--one on the band and one in each corner--and half-shells applied to the wall. It rests on two scroll-shaped legs connected by a large openwork shell. The piece is topped with a white marble slab with a corbin beak that follows the console's curve. Rich patina with multiple hues resulting from wear and natural aging. Very stable; minor restoration to the marble. Payment via PayPal, bank transfer, check, or credit card.
