Description

Lamp featuring a cameo-carved shell titled "The Kiss." Early 20th century. An exotic shell mounted as a lamp, carved with an image of an embracing couple. The male figure is winged; he is likely Eros (Cupid), the god of love, beauty, temperance, and tenderness. The carving rests on a tripod base made of green-patinated bronze, decorated with satyr heads. Direct wiring; no switch. It is in working order. The shell unscrews from the base to allow access to the light bulb. Dimensions: 11 cm x 8 cm; height: 20 cm.
