Description

Large bronze sculpture with a brown patina depicting a woman playing the mandolin, in the style of Albert-Ernest Carrier-Belleuse. A beautiful piece, finely crafted and with a striking presence, the sculpture features a warm, uniform brown patina. The figure, clad in richly draped, finely crafted antique-style clothing, rests on a circular base adorned with floral motifs; its bronze construction lends it a beautiful density and a substantial weight of approximately 20 kg. The pedestal features a plaque bearing the inscription "A. CARRIES-BELLEUSE," though the artist usually signed "A. CARRIER-BELLEUSE." We note this spelling variation--possibly resulting from an error in the workshop or foundry--as the bronze is presented here in the style of Carrier-Belleuse. France, 19th century, Napoleon
