Description

Necklace consisting of a pendant and chain made of 800-th sterling silver, with marcasites and a faux purple stone. The central stone, which imitates amethyst, is set in the center of a hexagonal solid silver setting pavé-set with marcasites in several rows interspersed with openwork florets. The Louis XVI-style knot-shaped bail, made of silver and marcasite, is held in place by a silver chain with jaseron links. France, Paris, circa 1900 Wild boar's head hallmark: 800 parts per thousand, used in Paris from 1838 to 1962. Total weight: 8.18 g A few marcassites are missing Note: This Belle Époque piece has plenty of charm Carefully packaged, shipped via Colissimo with insurance.
