Description

Oil on canvas. In a lush countryside through which a tranquil stream flows, several figures of common folk are depicted: in the foreground, the washerwoman sits on the ground resting, exchanging a few words with the woman who has come to draw water with her young daughter; further away, beyond the stream, a shepherd with his flock of grazing sheep, and a herdsman with his cows. The scene evokes a peaceful and serene life, marked by work amidst nature. The painting has been restored and relined in the past; it currently requires cleaning. It is presented in a period-style frame. ARARPI0316787
