Description

Antique single-flower glass vase by Théodore Legras (1839-1916). A remarkable decorative piece from the Art Nouveau period, circa 1900. Diabolo-shaped, the design combines a frosted background in subtle shades of beige and salmon pink with a polychrome enameled floral pattern. Long stems of carnations unfold gracefully across the body, while friezes of ivy leaves adorn the neck and lower section. Height: 36.5 cm. Very good condition Théodore Legras (1839-1916), born in the Vosges, was one of the great French glassmakers of the late 19th century. Based in Saint-Denis, where he ran a major glassworks, he developed an extremely diverse range of artistic glassware. His creations are notably distinguished by their enameled, engraved, or painted designs, inspired by flora,
