Description

A Rare "Herend Fruits" Tea Set -- Acquired in London in 1965 This charming and exceptionally well-preserved Herend tea set boasts a particularly interesting provenance. Acquired in London in 1965, it was purchased partly from Fortnum & Mason and partly from Thomas Goode--two of London's most prestigious purveyors of luxury goods and fine tableware. The set was subsequently bequeathed to me by a close friend in 1980 and has remained in my possession ever since. Remarkably, it appears never to have been used since its acquisition. It has thus come down to the present day in exceptional condition, retaining all the charm and refinement of a 19th-century Herend set. This service for six includes: A Herend teapot with a rose-shaped finial A lidded sugar bowl, also with a rose-shaped finialA milk jugSix cupsSix matching saucersThe cups and saucers feature the delightful "Frutta" pattern, showcasing a lovely array of hand-painted fruits and foliage in a variety of vibrant colors. The design is enhanced by elegant gilding, lending the set the refined and unmistakable look of early Herend porcelain.Each piece is entirely hand-painted, making every element subtly unique. The combination of colorful fruit motifs, delicate painting, and gold detailing makes this tea set a highly decorative and sought-after piece.Its condition is exceptional for its age. It shows no chips, cracks, crazing, or repairs, and the porcelain remains remarkably pristine.The fact that this set was purchased in London in 1965 from two prestigious retailers--and has remained virtually untouched since--gives it a provenance that is particularly valuable to collectors of antique Herend porcelain.
