Description

An antique terracotta bust with a brown patina depicting a young cleric, his head turned slightly and his gaze directed to the side. The figure is dressed in clerical attire, meticulously rendered in its folds and details, featuring a wide collar and tasseled trim. The curly hair and the modeling of the face reflect the historicist style inspired by the Italian Renaissance. The patina displays beautiful nuances as well as some wear and tear due to age. The sculpture is hollow and bears the stamp of the Manufacture de Signa on the base, along with the model number 936. The Manufacture de Signa, established near Florence in the late 19th century, produced numerous decorative terracotta pieces inspired by ancient Italian sculpture, particularly Renaissance models. Height: 16.5 cm. Very good condition
