Description

Large console table serving as a sideboard, made of mahogany and mahogany veneer, from the Empire period. Two console arms carved with winged swans, ending in mahogany scrolls, support a large gray Sainte-Anne marble top with rounded front edges that follow the cabinet's profile. The top, which is molded, features a wide drawer (116 cm). The piece rests on a large square plinth, as do the rear legs, which are accented by two moldings simulating a capital. The original glass back panel illuminates this generously sized piece with elegant proportions, brought to life by the swan carvings. Empire period, in very fine condition
