Description

Large Japanese Imari-style dish, made of hand-painted porcelain, decorated in the traditional palette of underglaze blue, iron red, enameled green, and gold highlights. The central panel features an elegant floral design, surrounded by panels depicting figures in garden landscapes, alternating with floral cartouches and a rich border decoration. The overall effect is a highly decorative composition, typical of the Imari aesthetic. With its impressive diameter of 40 cm, this piece is perfectly suited as a serving platter, wall-mounted dish, or decorative collector's item. The reverse side features a blue design as well as a red square stamp beneath the base. Based on the style, color palette, and quality of the decoration, this piece can be identified as a Japanese Imari dish from the late 19th or early
