Description

Double bed designed by Pierre Guariche in the late 1960s as part of the interior design developed for the apartments at the La Plagne resort. Designed for a 140 cm x 190 cm sleeping surface, the bed is made of plywood and white laminate, accented by exposed wood edges and elements. It is complemented by two panels forming the headboard and two nightstands, creating a compact ensemble characteristic of the solutions devised by Guariche to optimize space in mountain apartments. This bed complements the furniture system that includes the bunk bed, also designed by Guariche. It can be partially positioned underneath the bunk bed to form a bench, allowing for various room configurations. Headboard: 240 cm Provenance: apartment in the resort of La Mongie-Tourmalet,
