Description

A charming pair of Louis XVI-style bronze cassolettes, finely chased and gilded, resting on circular white marble bases. Made during the 19th century, they elegantly exemplify the neoclassical style then in vogue, inspired by decorative models from the late 18th century. Each cassolette features an ovoid-shaped covered vase in white marble, accentuated by a rich gilded bronze mount decorated with beaded friezes, godrons, and foliate motifs. The handles, formed of garlands of laurel leaves suspended between two finely carved ram's heads, constitute a remarkable homage to the Louis XVI ornamental repertoire. The vase is supported by three richly chased gilded bronze tripod legs, richly chased gilded bronze, ending in zoomorphic feet evoking the legs of a ram. The lid is surmounted by a pine.
