Description

Oil on canvas depicting a portrait of a woman in profile, monogrammed "EP" in the lower left corner. An elegant portrait of a woman shown in profile, facing to the right, wearing a delicate white headscarf with red patterns. The subject wears a dress in shades of ochre and yellow, accented with small floral motifs and a white bodice. Here, the painter favors an intimate portrait, with a dark, neutral background that highlights the complexion of the face, the subtlety of the modeling, and the luminosity of the costume. The brushwork, the rendering of the face, and the composition of the portrait are consistent with the work of Émile-Auguste Pinchart, a French painter trained in the circle of Jean-Léon Gérôme, known for his genre scenes, his portraits of women, and, later, his Orientalist
