Description

17th-century Bolognese master - "Saint Jerome Hearing the Trumpets of the Last Judgment" Saint Jerome, depicted as a penitent hermit, looks up toward the sky with an expression of spiritual ecstasy, his eyes wide open and his mouth slightly parted. He is seated in a rocky landscape, draped in a deep red robe that contrasts with the dark and gloomy background. His muscular torso is bare, and his hands are clasped over his chest in a gesture of deep emotion. To his right, a crucifix, an open book, and a skull rest on a stand. Above him, a trumpet--a symbol of the Last Judgment--sounds from the heavens. The artist's dramatic use of light and shadow, combined with the expressive rendering of the figure, evokes a powerful sense of awe and spiritual awakening. Oil on canvas, 109 x 84 cm Good
