Period : 19th century

Condition : En l'etat

Description

An unusual antique double-sided gingerbread mould, carved from sycamore, probably Dutch, and dated 1887. Each side is deeply carved with a full-length figure in traditional costume: a gentleman wearing a plumed hat and carrying a sword on one side, and a lady in an elaborately decorated long dress and distinctive headdress on the other. The mould bears the carved initials "CHVH" and the date 1887. It retains a rich, naturally developed patina. There are numerous old woodworm holes, clearly visible in the photographs. The woodworm is no longer active and has long since died. Dimensions: 37 × 12 cm. Good condition.
