Description

This beautiful porcelain vase features the most exquisite decoration--in a burst of color, the artist has painted a bouquet of multicolored flowers on the front. In the tradition of the greatest flower painters, he has skillfully harmonized the shades and the various flowers he used in his composition; they are all painted with such realism and delicacy that one might mistake them for the real thing. The stand alongside fully bloomed roses, while a few fuchsias and morning glories complete this composition. On the reverse side, a more understated bouquet of poppies rises toward the neck; a few small flowering twigs scattered here and there complete the ornamentation of this vase. The widely flared neck and the base are accented with blue and gold borders. Date: mid-19th century. Height: 45
