Description

Fernand Andrey-Prévost (1890-1961) was a French painter who specialized in Parisian cityscapes and street scenes. His oil paintings, executed with an impetuous yet sensitive touch, poetically capture the atmosphere of Paris's working-class neighborhoods--particularly Montmartre--throughout the seasons. This oil on panel, dating from the period 1935-1945, depicts a view of Montmartre under the snow. The snow-covered rooftops, stone facades, and deserted street lend the scene a quiet and poetic atmosphere, characteristic of Parisian winter landscapes during the interwar period. Signed lower left.
