Description

A wonderful display of glassmaking skill, combining glass threading, free-blown work and intricate pincer decoration to create this small masterpiece of glass lacework: a winged vase measuring 15 cm x 13 cm, with a diameter of 6.5 cm. Lightweight piece: 250 g.

The work of an anonymous 19th century artist. The structure of the base brings to mind certain Norman cider pitchers... Yet, when properly displayed, it looks more like one of those deep-sea jellyfish drifting through the ocean depths. A superb object, modest in size but remarkable in quality.
