Description

An important Piedmontese sideboard made of walnut, crafted in the early 19th century, characterized by an imposing structure and rich artisanal craftsmanship. The cabinet features two doors at the bottom, embellished with panels carved with elegant geometric and floral motifs. The upper section features decorated drawers, while the upper cabinet includes two additional drawers and an open top with shelves, ideal for displaying ceramics, books, or decorative objects. The walnut craftsmanship, balanced proportions, and numerous carved details reflect the traditional Piedmontese cabinetmaking style of the era. The sideboard retains a beautiful antique patina and shows signs of wear and imperfections consistent with its age. It requires conservative restoration work aimed at preserving
