Description

An elegant Charles X console table showcasing fine Neapolitan cabinetmaking by Pietro Viola, dating to around 1830. The piece features a refined maple wood structure, exquisitely inlaid with amaranth wood in floral and scroll motifs that accentuate the harmony of its lines. The yellow marble top adds brightness and distinction to the overall design. A distinctive feature is the pair of front supports, designed as intertwined double scrolls resting on carved, decorated bases and joined by a crossbar that ensures both stability and aesthetic continuity. Rectangular, fluted rear supports complete the composition with understated elegance. The quality of the inlay and the refinement of the silhouette attest to the mastery of Pietro Viola, one of the most esteemed cabinetmakers of 19th-century Naples. A rare and
