Description

An elegant pair of Louis XVI armchairs, made in Naples and dating from the late 18th century. The chairs feature a finely carved wooden frame gilded with gold leaf, adorned with rosette motifs and classical decorations. The backrests are medallion-shaped, slightly contoured, and connected to curved armrests that join the waistband via curved uprights. The seat, spacious and comfortable, is padded and upholstered in smooth white fabric. The tapered, fluted legs end in spurs, lending the composition a sense of slenderness and precision. A refined example of Neapolitan Neoclassical style, these armchairs represent a perfect balance between formal elegance and functional comfort, typical of furniture produced in the Bourbon region.
