paper, with borders and some details hand-watercolored in the style of the period. The sheet measures approximately 49 × 38.5 cm and consists of two parts joined in the center, as is also clearly visible on the reverse. The condition is consistent with its age: there is widespread efflorescence and foxing, signs of aging, and slight warping of the paper. The central join between the two sheets is visible. Venice,
