Description

A small Arts and Crafts desk in mahogany and maple, dating from the late 19th century and originating from England. The design is dominated by a central drawer that supports an elegant upper section with a three-part drop-down door. The inlaid maple panels feature floral motifs that are also found on the lower panel of the base, creating a refined sense of decorative continuity. Inside, a maple frame provides open compartments and eight mahogany drawers, with a central door made of mahogany and rosewood. The interior top, upholstered in green cloth, adds a touch of functionality and style. This writing desk is a prime example of the aesthetics and craftsmanship of the Arts and Crafts movement, perfect for enriching a space with a piece of history and sophistication.
