Description

"Arlequin and Colombine Greeting the Audience," dated 1899. This early work by the artist--created when he was only 24 years old--demonstrates his avant-garde sensibilities through both its technique and composition. The year is 1899. Here, the "Master of Dreams" offers us a dual interpretation, paying homage both to the world of entertainment and to the myth of eternal love. In Pierre Laprade's excellent book, we learn that he published a lithograph of "Arlequin and Colombine" in 1899, the same year our painting was created. We had held it in our collection for 15 years, and it had been given to the painter Henri Marrot. It is now available on the art market. Oil on canvas on stretcher: 61x50 Signed and dated lower left Oak frame with total dimensions: 71x60 In good original condition
