Description

An early 20th-century mahogany bookcase from England, characterized by an elegant and functional design. The upper section features three doors, each composed of groups of eight hand-blown glass panes that lend the piece a sense of lightness and elegance, allowing books and objects to be displayed in a refined manner. The base, also featuring three doors, is embellished with paneling featuring a central inlay of fine mahogany, enhanced by maple and ebony trim that accentuates its details. A piece of furniture that combines aesthetics and practicality, perfect for classic and sophisticated settings. Product condition: Due to its age and wear, this product requires restoration and refinishing. We strive to present the actual condition of the piece as completely as possible
