Set Of Three Agate Spheres On Custom Bases

250 EUR

Period : 20th century

Condition : Très bon état

Description

The set consists of three lace agate spheres, each naturally characterized by intricate layering, veining, and concentric patterns that make every piece one-of-a-kind. The delicate hues and organic geometries of the agate create an almost painterly effect; upon observing its surface, one can discover abstract landscapes, waves, clouds, and subtle mineral patterns that have slowly formed over time. The three spheres are presented on custom bases. Lace agate is a variety of agate particularly prized for its stunning natural bands and textures, which are often extremely fine and complex. The characteristic layering is the result of extremely slow geological processes, during which silica gradually deposited inside rock cavities, creating these fascinating structures. Dimensions including the base: Sphere
