Description

An elegant Art Nouveau fire screen from France, dating to around 1910, featuring a black lacquered panel with a hand-painted floral motif in soft pink and green tones. The design captures the organic curves and stylized natural forms typical of the Art Nouveau movement. The screen stands on a cast-iron scrolled base with intricate detailing and graceful proportions, balancing decorative artistry with functional craftsmanship. The curved top edge and subtle gilt border lend refinement to its silhouette. This piece embodies the romantic elegance and fluid lines of early 20th-century French design; an exquisite accent for interiors inspired by Belle Époque sophistication.
