Description

Wrought-Iron Lemon Greenhouse - Tuscany, 20th Century
An elegant wrought-iron lemon greenhouse from Tuscany dating from the 1930s or 1940s, featuring refined architectural lines and a highly decorative style. The structure, measuring approximately 3 × 3 meters, features a substantial metal framework marked by posts, crossbeams, and large openings. Originally designed for growing citrus fruits during the colder months, it can easily be enclosed with glass, Plexiglas, or polycarbonate, transforming it into a charming greenhouse for plants and flowers. Its distinctive pavilion-style structure and the sophistication of its decorations also make it an attractive architectural and visual feature for gardens, courtyards, and historic homes. A striking piece that combines
