Description

Jean Rigaud (1912-1999) : "Doëlan, Finistère, the Harbor at Low Tide," oil on canvas, 46 × 55 cm, mounted in a Parnassian frame, 54 × 74 cm. Although painted before he was named Official Painter to the Navy (he received this title in 1956, and his stay in Doëlan was in 1954), this is one of the finest works we have ever had, thanks to the boldness of the composition, the warm and luminous palette set against cool tones (which may seem paradoxical, but is exquisitely rendered here), and the transparency of the water--all of which combine to make it particularly desirable... The artist participated in group exhibitions, notably at the Salon de la Société Nationale des Beaux-Arts, where he served as a jury member and committee member; he received numerous awards, and his paintings
