Description

Amberina polychrome glass decanter, attributed to the glassworks of Empoli, Italy, circa 1960. This elegant carafe stands out for its architectural shape--reminiscent of a pyramid or a beehive--and its stunning gradient of colors ranging from amber yellow to orange and ruby red. Its geometric body, punctuated by raised horizontal ribs, is topped by a red neck and a faceted stopper with amber hues. The clear glass handle adds a delicate contrast to the overall design. The glass features beautiful variations in transparency and a few small bubbles inherent to its manufacturing process, highlighting the decorative nature of this Italian glasswork. Height: 31.5 cm. In perfect condition. Carefully and securely packaged; fast shipping with insurance and tracking.
