

Pair Of 19th-century Carved Stone Planters On Wrought-iron Stands

1 400 EUR

Period : 19th century

Condition : Bon état

Material : Wrought iron

Description

A superb pair of highly decorative 19th-century carved stone planters, each resting on an elegant, hand-forged iron stand. These solid stone planters, individually carved, feature the natural texture, subtle variations in color, and patina of age characteristic of authentic antique stone. Their robust architectural character contrasts beautifully with the lighter, more delicate lines of the wrought-iron stands. The iron bases, crafted using traditional methods, provide both stability and elegance by elevating the stone planters. The combination of carved stone and wrought iron gives the ensemble a timeless appeal, ideal for classic, Mediterranean, rustic, or country-style settings. Thanks to their beautiful antique patina and generous proportions, these planters make striking decorative elements to frame an entrance,
