18th-century French Bench Made Of Painted Wood With A High Backrest

1 100 EUR

Period : 18th century

Condition : Très bon état

Material : Painted wood

Description

A charming and highly decorative 18th-century French bench made of painted wood, distinguished by its generous proportions, high backrest, and surface beautifully weathered by time. Made entirely of wood, this bench has retained a beautiful painted finish with a natural patina; it bears the signs of wear, variations in color, and marks of use accumulated over more than two centuries. This authentic surface lends the piece considerable warmth and character. Its high backrest creates a striking architectural silhouette, while the wide seat and imposing proportions give it a presence that is both majestic and welcoming. Its understated structure and aged painted finish are characteristic of 18th-century French provincial furniture, combining functionality, artisanal craftsmanship, and understated decorative elegance. With a seat height of approximately 40 cm, this bench remains functional while serving as a striking decorative piece. It will fit perfectly in an entryway, a country home, a dining area, a kitchen, a sunroom, or an interior that blends antique and contemporary furniture. An example of 18th-century French vernacular furniture full of character and increasingly rare, retaining all the visual appeal characteristic of naturally aged painted surfaces.
