

Finger Bowl From Emperor Napoleon III's Service, Made Of Baccarat Crystal And Engraved With A N

200 EUR

Period : 19th century

Condition : Bon état

Material : Crystal

Description

Finger bowl from the service of Emperor Napoleon III made of cobalt-blue Baccarat crystal engraved with the imperial cipher beneath a crown. This small blown-glass vessel resting on a foot is engraved with the Emperor's cipher, formerly gilded; it likely originates from the Baccarat crystalworks, as identical models without the cipher are attributed to that workshop. A similar model, but more flared and made of white opaline, is held in the collections of the Château de Fontainebleau (donated by Mr. Alain Roger-Ravilly, F-2021.4.28.1). Second Empire period. Fairly good condition, with signs of wear on the surface and interior.
