Description

Mahogany and marquetry display cabinet - Louis XVI style - Elegant display cabinet made of mahogany and precious woods, in the Louis XVI style, dating from the late 19th century. Rectangular in shape with rounded corners, it features a large glass front as well as glass-paned sides, offering a beautiful view of the displayed objects. The front is particularly well-crafted, accented with geometric marquetry fillets and friezes arranged in a herringbone pattern. The fluted posts harmoniously extend the lines of the piece. The interior is fitted with several height-adjustable glass shelves, allowing for the display of porcelain, glassware, collectibles, or curios. The display case rests on four tapered, fluted legs, embellished with beautiful bronze trim featuring laurel leaf
