

Art Nouveau Earthenware Basin.

Description

This large earthenware basin from the late 19th century features a rich, exuberant decoration, characteristic of Art Nouveau; it consists of large flowers painted in polychrome within and twisted, alternating with floral motifs in shades of gray on a beige background; the whole is enhanced by borders and arabesques painted in gold. On the reverse side is the Japanese-style signature of the famous Keller & Guerin company. The factory, located in Lunéville, was managed by the Keller and Guerin families from 1786 to 1923; numerous Art Nouveau artists contributed to the design of the ceramics produced by the manufactory; Émile Gallé, Louis Majorelle, and Edmond Lachenal created numerous plant-inspired designs in the purest "Nouvelle" style.
