Description

An elegant pair of small Wedgwood earthenware planters from the 19th century, featuring a deep blue background and white relief decoration inspired by antiquity. The decoration, featuring figures draped in the classical style, trees, and animals, directly evokes the neoclassical aesthetic so dear to the English manufacturer. A refined and particularly decorative pair, in Wedgwood's famous "blue and white" style. These two planters feature a cylindrical shape that flares slightly toward the neck, accentuated by several molded bands. They are adorned with an elegant white relief design on a blue background, characteristic of Wedgwood's production and directly inspired by ancient models. The compositions feature figures dressed in ancient style, accompanied by trees and small animals, in a style evoking mythological scenes and the decor of ancient Greece and Rome. The contrast between the deep blue of the background and the whiteness of the reliefs lends the pieces great elegance and a striking decorative presence. This color combination is particularly emblematic of the Wedgwood factory, which played a major role in popularizing the neoclassical style in Europe during the 18th and 19th centuries. A beautiful antique pair, ideal for display together in a classic interior or as decorative accents on a bookshelf, console table, or display case.
