Description

A rare and beautiful large oval portrait on ivory, framed in bronze and mounted under glass, from the 18th century, depicting the Countess of Worcester, painted by the talented miniaturist Rawlandson in 1786. Displaying great finesse, this high-quality miniature painting depicts this lovely woman with her hair styled in the Turkish manner, as was fashionable in the late 18th century. This expressive and intriguing piece has everything to captivate with its freshness and generous proportions; the marvelous details of this work are not lacking, and here you see a beautiful and authentic collector's piece, preserved over time in soft pastel tones.
