Description

A lovely Louis XV-style fruitwood game table that can also serve as a pedestal table or side table. It rests on four curved legs, each topped with a slender carved wooden foot. The apron is scalloped and embellished with subtle molding. The tabletop consists of a fixed section and a removable section. The fixed section of the tabletop is formed by the frame, whose border features elegant beak-of-corbin molding and four rounded corners. The central part of the tabletop (called the "bouchon") is removable and also reversible. One side is decorated with a curled pattern, while the other is covered with brown leather adorned with a gold-colored frieze. The edges of this section feature a groove that serves as a guide to position the chosen side. A storage compartment is built into the rim for storing
