Description

Large glazed stoneware planter on a pedestal - In the Westerwald style - Late 19th / early 20th century
A large and spectacular glazed stoneware planter on a pedestal, likely of continental origin, possibly German, crafted in the style of Westerwald pieces toward the end of the 19th or the beginning of the 20th century. The piece features a beautiful combination of gray, cobalt blue, and greenish hues, characteristic of decorative stoneware in this tradition. The richly worked surface features a particularly abundant high-relief decoration. The upper planter is adorned with figures and mascarons in relief, accompanied by Renaissance-inspired geometric and ornamental motifs. It rests on a substantial circular pedestal composed of several molded elements. The tall central column features a remarkable applied decoration of foliage and climbing vines, surrounding a large heraldic cartouche in relief. The tiered circular base echoes this rich ornamentation and provides excellent stability to the entire piece. The cobalt blue decoration on a light gray background, combined with the reliefs and various shades of glaze, gives this piece remarkable depth and decorative presence. A large piece of historicist ceramics, particularly decorative due to its proportions, the richness of its modeling, and its Renaissance-inspired design. Period: late 19th - early 20th century Origin: continental Europe, likely Germany Technique: glazed stoneware, cobalt decoration, and applied relief elements Style: historicist / Renaissance, in the style of Westerwald productions Dimensions: 111 cm tall for the entire piece x 52 cm wide x 40 cm in diameter for the pot DELIVERY ONLY IN PARIS AND THE ÎLE-DE-FRANCE REGION FOR 120.00 EUROS For delivery to other locations, please provide your ZIP code and city so I can make a request with the carriers
