Description

An elegant kogo (incense box) in red lacquer, decorated on the lid with a majestic flying crane executed in gold maki-e lacquer. The finely detailed rendering of the plumage lends the bird remarkable elegance and a vivid sense of movement. The interior and base are finished in silver lacquer, creating a refined chromatic contrast with the rich red exterior. Complete with its original tomobako (signed wooden storage box). The crane, a traditional symbol of longevity, good fortune, and happiness in Japanese culture, enhances the auspicious character of this refined lacquer work. Period: Showa mid of 20th century Dimensions: 7.2 x 2 cm. Condition report: Very good condition.
