Description

An important dining room set dating from the 1920s, consisting of a table and six matching chairs. The table features a refined, richly crafted wrought-iron frame, characterized by openwork plant and floral motifs. The four legs, sinuous and sculptural, are decorated with leaf motifs and terminate in elegant volutes. The frame is topped by a light-colored marble slab, whose understated appearance creates a pleasing contrast with the decorative richness of the iron. The six chairs feature the same wrought-iron craftsmanship, with openwork backs featuring sinuous lines and botanical-inspired decorations. The seats are upholstered in green faux leather. A set with a striking decorative presence, reflecting the ornamental taste of the early decades of the 20th century, suitable for both a dining room and a
