Description

An elegant small Venetian sideboard in lacquered wood, dating from the Louis XIV period, featuring rich painted decoration and a striking antique patina. The front, framed by two side posts, features a single door adorned with a central panel displaying symmetrical ornamental motifs and volutes, further embellished with elegant painted decorations. The green, ochre, and red hues of the lacquer, softened by the passage of time, lend the piece a particularly warm and decorative character. The door conceals an interior compartment organized with shelves. On the back of the door, an antique handwritten document is also preserved, an element that adds further historical interest to the piece. Its compact size and the quality of its decoration make this small sideboard an interesting example of a
