Description

A stunning Italian ceramic lamp from the 1970s, attributed to Bitossi, featuring a textured geometric design with alternating bands of orange, black and gold. The cylindrical ceramic body is particularly striking for its small-checked pattern and color scheme, which are very characteristic of 1970s Italian design. The ceramic is mounted on a black metal base , and there is also a brass metal element at the top, between the ceramic and the lamp holder, which gives the piece height and presence. The bottom is marked with the number B37/22. The "22" corresponds to the height of the ceramic section. The ceramic is in very good condition, with no chips or cracks. The lamp is presented with a vintage lampshade from the 1970s--new from old stock (deadstock). The cream, brown, and orange tones complement the base's design in a harmonious period pairing. The assembly also features a hole near the base of the ceramic, which originally allowed for more conventional wiring, though we believe the metal elements are original. Functional wiring, with a new switch and plug.
