Description

Large Napoleon III-era three-door rosewood bedroom wardrobe - 19th century A substantial and elegant rosewood bedroom wardrobe from the Napoleon III period, 19th century, featuring exquisite cabinetmaking and particularly imposing proportions. It opens at the front with three large doors featuring beveled mirrors. The central door, which is wider, is flanked by two side doors. A remarkable and uncommon feature: the two side doors are fitted with mirrors on both sides, featuring a beveled mirror on the exterior and a second mirror on the interior. Once the doors are opened, this ingenious design offers multiple viewing angles and underscores the luxurious character of this bedroom wardrobe. The spacious interior is fitted with numerous height-adjustable shelves. The lower section also includes three drawers, providing additional storage. The front is richly detailed, with fluted stiles, molded frames, and elegant carved decoration. The upper section is particularly striking with its large, carved central pediment, surrounded by ornamentation characteristic of the Napoleon III style. The rosewood displays beautiful, deep hues, enhanced by the interplay of veneers and the quality of the moldings. A very beautiful and imposing Napoleon III bedroom cabinet, remarkable both for its decoration and its rare double-sided mirror system.
