Description

This richly textured oil painting presents an expansive landscape dominated by a solitary poplar tree and rocky foreground, opening onto rolling hills beneath a luminous, softly coloured sky. Vigorous impasto and energetic brushwork build the terrain through overlapping passages of turquoise, blue, mauve, ochre, green and rose, giving the surface an almost sculptural quality. Rather than describing the landscape naturalistically, the artist uses heightened colour and rhythmic strokes to convey atmosphere and movement. The slender vertical tree provides a strong counterpoint to the sweeping horizontal landscape, creating a particularly balanced composition. Signed lower left, the work reflects the expressive approach to colour and landscape associated with early twentieth-century European Post-Impressionist painting. Artist Unidentified artist; signed lower left with a partially legible signature that appears to begin "Emil..." or similar. Artist Details The artist demonstrates a confident command of impasto, expressive colour and simplified landscape forms. The pronounced surface texture and departure from naturalistic colour suggest an artist working within the European Post-Impressionist and early modern landscape traditions. Movements Post-Impressionism / Expressionism Artist Influenced by Stylistically recalls the colour-led landscapes of Paul Cézanne, Henri Matisse and the wider European Post-Impressionist tradition. Frame Condition Presented in an ornate gilt frame with decorative floral and scroll moulding and a painted inner slip. The frame shows visible age-related wear, rubbing and areas of loss to the decorative surface, particularly around the edges and corners.
