Description

A mid-19th-century mahogany Louis Philippe sideboard from England, representing a refined example of the craftsmanship of the era. The piece features an upper section with two glass-fronted doors, perfect for displaying precious objects while keeping them protected from dust. The side posts are embellished with leaf and scroll carvings, a decorative motif that is harmoniously repeated on the base as well. The base includes a practical under-top drawer and a pair of paneled double doors, offering ample space for storing everyday items or linens. The choice of mahogany not only lends elegance but also ensures sturdiness and durability over time. Product Condition: This product, due to its age and wear, requires restoration and re-polishing. We strive to present the actual
