Description

A high-density blown glass bottle evoking a figure, with an interlaced pattern of abstract spots; the stopper resembles a head, with the interlaced pattern extending from it. This one-of-a-kind piece, dated 1993, perfectly illustrates the artist's virtuosity. It employs the complex technique of Sommerso, encasing a core of intense shades of fuchsia and amethyst purple within a thick layer of mouth-blown transparent glass. The base features an elegant frosted/satin-finished glass finish, creating a striking contrast with the translucency of the body. Its original sculpted stopper blends harmoniously with the piece as a whole.Signed and dated on the underside of the base. 1993Height: 20 cm Depth: 12 cm Weight:1.5 kgJean-Claude Novarowas a master glassmaker born in Antibes (Alpes-Maritimes) on October 18, 1943, and who died in Monaco on December 30, 2014. Once upon a time, there was a smoking den from which a hellish fire blazed. The man would plunge a glass rod into it, pulling it out red-hot and smoking. Then, with all the strength in his lungs, the man breathed life into the molten sand, shaping the nascent glass...This ancient method is still used today by Jean-Claude Novaro, undoubtedly the most gifted glass artist of the second half of this century.
