Description

Oil on canvas, Neapolitan school, first half of the 18th century. A fine oil painting on canvas depicting an evocative sacred composition featuring the Virgin and Child, flanked by figures of saints from the Carmelite Order, attributable to the Neapolitan devotional tradition. The Virgin, draped in a wide blue mantle and a red robe, occupies the center of the composition and holds the Infant Jesus, depicted nude and in a lively pose. On either side are two monastic figures kneeling in adoration, while in the upper part, bathed in a soft glow, small angels and cherub heads are visible. Of particular interest are the symbolic elements arranged in the lower register: the book with white lilies and the sword, attributes that help identify the devotional dimension and the meaning of the composition.

The scene is constructed according to a pyramidal composition, with a marked emphasis on the figures' gestures and the contrast between the light tones of their garments and the dark background. The work exhibits stylistic characteristics attributable to Neapolitan painting of the first half of the 18th century, within the refined Neapolitan Baroque and late-Baroque tradition, characterized by a warm color palette, a soft rendering of skin tones, and a strong compositional theatricality. A painting of remarkable decorative presence and collector's interest, particularly suited for formal settings and collections dedicated to early Italian painting.
