Description

A beautiful pair of antique faceted steel earrings, consisting of two small hinged elements and a large drop-shaped ball. Each element is entirely covered with small, cut and polished steel facets, arranged to capture and reflect light. Highly prized in the 19th century, this meticulous craftsmanship created a sparkling effect reminiscent of gemstones. 19th-century craftsmanship. Good overall condition. The clasps were likely later modified to feature an 18-karat gold swan-neck clasp. For the sake of accuracy, please note the very slight absence of a small facet on the back of one of the spheres (see photograph), which does not affect the appearance of the piece when worn. Weight: 20.4g
